CNOS Neurosurgeon, Matthew Johnson, to see patients at Cherokee Regional Medical Center

Matthew Johnson, MD, Neurosurgeon from CNOS in Dakota Dunes, SD, will begin a monthly clinic in Cherokee, IA, on Wednesday, October 3, 2018, at Cherokee Regional Medical Center. Dr. Johnson is a Fellow of the American Association of Neurological Surgeons.

He provides his surgical expertise for a wide variety of brain and spine disorders. He has special interest in Deep Brain Stimulation for movement disorders and is working with Mercy Medical Center to build a program to offer this life-changing surgery locally in the Siouxland area. He also has experience in Minimally Invasive Spine Surgery and has special training in Stereotactic Radiosurgery, which can often treat brain tumors with focused radiation rather than open surgery.

"We are constantly striving to improve access to care locally, so we are pleased to have Dr. Johnson offer his expertise through the Cherokee Regional Medical Center Specialty Clinic," said Rita Comstock, CRMC Specialty Clinic Manager. "There is definitely a need for his services in our area, and we welcome Dr. Johnson and his staff to Cherokee."

Dr. Johnson will join Dr. Daniel Nelson, CNOS Orthopaedic Surgeon specializing in hip and knee who currently sees patients at Cherokee Regional Medical Center. CNOS Specialists enjoy serving the Cherokee area and appreciate the collaborative relationships with many physicians in the region.

"We are both honored and excited to expand our service to the people of Cherokee and surrounding areas," says Nolan Lubarski, CEO, CNOS; "Cherokee has an engaged healthcare community making it an obvious extension of our already established CNOS satellite clinics in Northwest Iowa."

To schedule an appointment at the CRMC Specialty Clinic with either Dr. Johnson or Dr. Nelson, please call (605) 217-2667.
